

Law School Blog
SUBMISSION INSTRUCTIONS

1. All Law School academic staff are encouraged to contribute short pieces to the Law School Blog. Law PhD students will also be approached in this regard.
2. Blog short pieces can take the form of reaction to, and discussion of recent legal developments/caselaw.
3. Blog pieces can also take the form of more reflective, long view type pieces, which adopt a more general overview approach to a legal issue.
4. Blog pieces should ideally be between 1000 – 1500 words.
5. They should be written in a Word doc format, using Verdana, font size 11, 1.5 word spacing.
6. Hyperlinks should be used for references (as opposed to footnotes). This is done by selecting "Insert" on the menu bar, then selecting "Link" and pasting in the URL to your source/s.
7. Please include a general Category (e.g. Medical Ethics, Extradition Law) and a few Tags (e.g. Assange, End of Life...) at the end of your piece
8. Blog posts will feature an Author Profile at the end which will be a link to your profile, photo and email address as set up on Worktribe
9. Pieces should be submitted to the Blog email address:
LawSchoolBlog@rgu.ac.uk
10. There will normally be about a 1 month lapse between your submission and its publication by Abby Othman Wilson (Manager for the Blog), to allow for editing, any changes and publication readying.
